

"Shows What Police Can Do," Says Mayor of Reds' Arrest.

Mayor Mitchell and Police Commissioner Woods were in high spirits last night over the coup at the Cathedral and the detectives' work which led up to it. The Mayor said:

"It was a splendid piece of work on the part of the department, and shows what the police can do when they have support in working out the plans of the department without being subject to clamor and criticism.

"I have known for several weeks that the police were in touch with these people, and were living with them with a view to preventing a repetition of the incidents of some months ago. I am highly pleased that they have been so successful.

"The prevention of crimes of violence and the apprehension of criminals is the most important work the police have to do. Our policemen are well able to do that sort of work, and I think they are becoming more and more so."

Commissioner Woods said: "These two little fellows hadn't the capacity to think far enough ahead to carry out any such plan or programme as a 'reign of terror,' but we know that three or four days ago they said:

"Think what the people will say as they go up Fifth Avenue and see the Cathedral in ruins. Think of the send-off the papers will give us, and it will be us who did it all!"

"After wrecking the Cathedral they looked forward to going further. They did talk of Rockefeller, Carnegie and Vanderbilt, but that business about the banks—we knew about that."

"It was a great detective job. Barnett was made up so well that when he came to Headquarters this morning Captain Jimmy Dunn didn't know him, and wouldn't let him go into the line-up. He was still wearing his make-up and looked like John D. Criminals."

Abarno's Family Weep for Bomb Thrower as Good Boy Led Astray by Bad Company

That he was going to the printing shop. Frank carried nothing with him when he went out. The father was positive of this.

Mrs. A. Lerner, the wife of a Hungarian tailor with whom Charles Carbone has lodged, and boarded at 214 East Sixty-seventh Street for the past four months, was extremely flustered over the arrest of the anarchist yesterday.

She was not much concerned about Carbone's welfare, although she asserted that he had always been a "real nice fellow," quiet and prompt in the payment of the $5 he charged him for meals and room each week.

The dining room, where the bomb maker had been accustomed to sleep, was searched yesterday morning by the police, who appropriated all his letters, books and pictures. Two suits of clothes, belonging to Carbone, a number of stiff and negligee shirts, a mass of underwear and neckties, and numerous ties of cold cream, tooth powder and soap remained. From these indications it would seem that their owner was somewhat of an exquisite in "Red" circles.

Mrs. Lerner said that she had never thought of her boarder as an anarchist. He was a pleasant person, she said, about the house, she asserted. He left his lodgings yesterday morning a little after 4 o'clock. That was the last she had seen of him.

The basement club-room of the Gaetano Bresci Club, at 301 East 108th Street, the anarchistic group believed to have been behind the bomb plot, was searched yesterday. The organization was found to be a "fourty-year-old" group, and numbers among its members some of the most desperate anarchists of the country.

Dwellers in the house above the meeting place said that one of the members of the organization had his own key, and that the place was always kept locked unless a meeting was in progress. A lamp and heavy padlock barred the door of the chamber. Above its thickly grained window was an I. W. W. character, and a poster of a forty-year-old actor, urging that all destructive forces be turned to charity, but take no longer heed from the "accords of financiers." The last meeting was held on Sunday.

It has passed back into the hands of the anarchists. Following the instructions in the book, the three plotters bought in various places copper wire, chlorate of potash, black antimony sulphate, sulphur and powdered sugar.

Monday night came. Pulignano, Abarno and Carbone met for the last time before the great event. They swore their oath of secrecy, and then they made tests until they got one that would burn four inches in ten minutes. Then, having failed in all efforts to find an iron nail post head, Carbone produced cans for receptacles.

Last Sunday the great day for mixing the ingredients came. Abarno was the master hand to do this. He had a large mixing bowl and a wooden mixer. As he stood over the bowl of destruction he told of his dreams to Pulignano, who thus describes them:

"I would like to blow Carnegie's house down, and Rockefeller's, and the Vanderbilts, and all the banks, then we could have the capitalists' money," he said. "I would like to blow up the tombs of the dead bishops and archbishops buried in the Cathedral. That would be a fine protest against the churches, the capitalists and the police."

The churches, he continued, are archaic, especially the Catholic Church. The Episcopal Church is, also; the others not so much. There will be a reign of terror in New York when we begin.

Later that day he and Pulignano went to the Cathedral and made a survey. They considered whether it would be best to place it in the main vestibule and blow down the front, or before the altar, where it would play the worshippers. They finally decided to enter by the door in the middle of the Fifth Street side.

"We will leave it there by the second pillar," Abarno said, "and then walk out and get to our work in time. No one will miss us. There will be a great explosion. What write-ups we will get in all the papers! Especially what a fine write-up Galliani will give us in the Italian paper!"

"We will read them and laugh to think it was us—I should like to tell our friends, so they would know we did it—but we must keep silence. We will read about it—that will be good enough."

At this time the counter plot of the police was running closer and closer to them. Even as Abarno related with Pulignano as they walked along they were shadowed by Headquarters detectives.

Every move of himself and his companions, everything done, planned or talked about, Pulignano was sending to his co-plotters among the police.
